Health Challenge to feature on ACA

The third Workplace Health Challenge has now begun and I'm confident that all our participants will achieve excellent results from what is a very worthwhile health and safety initiative.

This time around, the Challenge has attracted attention from popular Ch 9 TV show, A Current Affair (ACA), and I'm pleased to say that International Power Hazelwood will be one of the businesses featured. This past week, an ACA crew has focused on the efforts of one of our own employees, Geoff (Jumbo) Yates, in his quest to achieve a healthy outcome at the end of this latest program.

Added to this, the collective efforts of all participants across a number of Victorian businesses will raise money for the Make a Wish foundation – a charity aimed at providing quality of life to sick children in our community.

I will advise you when the segment featuring Jumbo will go to air, but I hope you will all join me in wishing Jumbo all the best, not only in his health program but in raising awareness and sponsorship for this worthy charitable cause. ACA will return later in the year to hopefully see a fitter and healthier Jumbo Yates and reflect on the success of the program in raising health standards in highly industrialised workplaces.

I'm also pleased to announce that International Power Hazelwood will provide ($1000 or matching funding) for the Make A Wish charity to support the efforts of all Hazelwood participants and I certainly hope you all achieve your individual goals.
